This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

Henry Gibsone[1] was created a notary public by apostolic authority on 19 June, 1549. On the last day of February, 1563-4, he appeared at Edinburgh, in presence of the lords administrators of the act of parliament, 1563 c. 16, and having complied with the requirements of that statute, was found duly qualified and formally admitted to office. In the act of admission (Appendix No. I.) he is designated "Maister Henry Gibsone, notar, duelland within the towne of Glasgw, quhair he was borne, of the age of xxix yeiris or thairby, unmareit, within the diocesy of Glasgw." It would thus appear that on receiving his original appointment Gibsone was only fifteen years of age; but his first book does not begin till 1555, by which time he had attained majority.

After practising for some time as a notary Gibsone succeeded William Hegait in the town-clerkship of Glasgow about the year 1568. From want of council records, which are not preserved previous to January, 1573-4, the precise date of his appointment to that office has not been ascertained. On 1 June, 1574, "Maister Henry Gibsoun" was chosen "commone clerk for this yeir" from a leet of four, and similar appointments were made in successive years till 1581, when information ceases for a time on account of a blank in the records. The making up of a leet, however, seems to have been much of a formality, and it is probable that the first recorded appointment of 1574 was likewise a re-election. Three of Henry Gibsone's

[1] In protocol No. 808 it is mentioned that Henry Gibsone was a son of Mr. David Gibsone, rector of Ayr, whom, as ascertained from other sources, he succeeded in the possession of various properties, including tenements and lands which had belonged to St. Michael's chaplainry. See footnote to protocol No. 1535 and authorities cited; also protocol No. 805. Dr. David Murray, in "Rottenrow of Glasgow" (Regality Club, 3rd series, pt. 2 p. 41), has shown that Principal Robert Baillie, author of the well-known letters and memoirs, was a grandson of the notary.

protocol books have been preserved. The first two extend from 7 December, 1555, to 10 August, 1576, and the third begins on 28 April, 1598, and ends on 3 February, 1603. Protocols for the intermediate period have disappeared. The abstracts contained in the present volume nearly exhaust the contents of the first book.

Written on paper similar to that used by William Hegait, and some of the sheets bearing the "hand" water-mark (see vol. iv. p. 26), the shape of Gibsone's first volume has, by the doubling of the sheets, been made not folio but small quarto. In its old binding the book was provided with a parchment cover, consisting of a leaf taken from the Liturgy of the Church of Sarum, a form of service adopted at Glasgow in early times. There is double-column writing on both sides of the parchment, the directions to the officiating priest being in red ink, and some of the initial letters ornamented in red and blue. The writing on the exterior has been much injured through exposure, but that on the inner side, embracing the passage from Exodus xii. 1-11 in the Good Friday celebration of the Mass, is quite legible. A slip of parchment placed along the back of the book contains a fragment of musical notation.

A few pieces of paper pasted together were fastened within the parchment cover. One of these pieces is supposed to be a leaf taken from the proceedings of the consistory court at Glasgow during the time William Elphinstone, the eminent prelate, was official. An abstract of the writing contained on that leaf, and also particulars regarding the other MSS., will be found in Appendix II.

William Salmond, from whom Gibsone got his original appointment, was for a long time subdean of the Collegiate Church of the Holy Trinity at Edinburgh, and he probably held an appointment from the Papal Court authorising him to admit apostolic notaries in Scotland. II.—Miscellaneous Documents.[1]

(1) Proceedings of the Court of the Official of Glasgow.[2]

Stele.

On which day, the judge continued the cause moved between Jonet Stele and William Wrych till to-morrow. The parties cited with intimation apud acta.

Carmichell.

On which day, Mr. William Carmichell, vicar of Simontone, constituted his procurators (apud acta) and that according to the form of a prothogoll, viz., a noble lord Robert lord Kynnowill and Masters John Crechtone, precentor of Glasgow, David Gray, John Brare, Sir John Sugiorner, vicar of Are, Edward of Crechtone, John Scot, John M'Kewyn, conjunctly and severally, in all his causes and concerns (negotiis) to manage, intromit with, and to sue for, receive, and administer the fruits of his benefice and his other moveable goods and to distrain therefor; and expressly constituting the said vicar of Are as procurator for them to receive the fruits of his said vicarage and to distrain therefor, for which he shall answer to the other procurators; and specially with power to the lord of Kynnowill and John M'Kewyn to subscribe; and with all other clauses in the best form. Moreover, the said William Carmichell assigned his tack of the lands of Spangok to the lord of Kinnowil and to James Carmychell, after his decease, during the remaining terms thereof, and appointed them his assignees in the best form. And when the barony of Sanchar shall fall to the said lord Kynnowil by the decease of his father, the assignation of the said lands should be made to the said James Carmychell alone for the remaining period. The said William Carmichell appointed the lord of Kynnowill his executor for disposing of his goods according to the form of testament. Done in the city of Glasgow in the chamber of the notary, the ninth indiction, and the fifth year of the pontificate of Sixtus IV. Present: Sir James Orok, priest, and Robert Brounyswald, etc. Moreover, the said vicar discharged John Scot and John M'Kewyn of all and sundry his goods till this day; and for the future, that they shall faithfully account for their intromission with his goods to the executors . . . .

[1]These consist of a few leaves of paper which had been pasted together and placed within the parchment cover of the Protocol Book to serve as boards. In a few places the paper is torn or decayed, and this accounts for the blanks and supplied words in the print.

[2]The leaf from which these entries, written in Latin, are translated, appears to have formed part of an Act Book of the Court. The first three entries, written on the first page, must have shortly preceded in date those of 28 September, 1475, written on the other side.

JONET, DAUGHTER OF THOME.

On which day, Jonet, daughter of Thome, constituted, apud acta, her procurators, David Henderson, James Knokis, and Alan Gray, in the best form, with power to subscribe in all causes, etc.

On Thursday the 28th day of the month of September, in the year 1475.

KNOLLYS.

In the name of God, Amen. We, William of Elphinstoun, official of Glasgow, general judge in the matrimonial cause tending to divorce, moved between Jonet Knollys, pursuer, on the one part, and David Logane, defender, on the other part. The said [judge having carefully] and diligently considered the evidence, reasons, contentions, and allegations of each [of the parties]; and having taken the advice of men skilled in the law . . . we by this our diffinitive sentence which we hereby deliver . . . do pronounce, decern, and finally declare the pretended marriage between the said David and Jonet to be and to have been in itself null, void, and of no effect, because the said Jonet contracted said pretended marriage through force, fear and abduction (raptum) and she never consented thereto. With restored freedom, by our licence and authority, to either of them, if no canonical impediment shall stand in the way, to marry in the Lord as to them shall seem meet. Present: the said parties, etc. Read, delivered, etc.

ENNERKYPE.

We, William of Elphinstoun, official general of Glasgow, etc., having considered the cause . . . . etc., finally ordain Marion, spouse of John Davidsoun, to pay to Master John Maxwell, vicar of Ennerkype, three bolls of meal within thirty days, furth of the remainder of the teind of the glebe for the three first years contained in the first act. Moreover, for the first year of the two last years the said Jonet was absolved of the teind thereof because the said vicar . . . viz., Sir Thomas Bargane, John Mude, and Lyon Fenysoun . . .

Catalogue, p. 166). "Slayart boittis" were boats engaged in the taking or slaying of fish. "Coper" or "couper" was the designation given to boats engaged in trading.

By a charter dated 28th February, 1561-2, Queen Mary granted to James Campbell, brother's son to Colin Campbell of Ardkinglass, the assyse herring of the West Seas, from the Pentland Firth to the Mull of Galloway, and where the sea flows within the river Clyde, for payment of six lasts and two barrels of sufficient herring, at the burgh of Glasgow, between Martinmas and Candlemas yearly. The Bishop of Brechin (Alexander Campbell of the Ardkinglass family) appears to have had right to the "assyse" in 1596. A series of leases of the assise herring were subsequently given to the Argyle family, and in one of these granted by Queen Anne to John, Duke of Argyle in 1705 it is stated that "he and his predecessors have been lessees of the said assyse herring for many ages." (Fourth Report of Historical MSS. Commission, pp. 482-3).

The records of the convention of royal burghs show that the assise or tax on fishing boats was long regarded as a grievance. In a memorial to the commissioners of trade in 1711 the convention represented that "the ancient duty of assise or sise fish, or a certain number of fish out of every boat, belonging to the crown, but is everywhere set out for inconsiderable rents and has never been profitable to the crown, or of any inconsiderable advantage to the grantees, yet is a very considerable prejudice to the fishing, especially herring." (Convention Records, iv. p. 513). Again in 1733 the convention complained that "the coast fishing and small boats is much discouraged by ane syze or duty imposed upon every boat both in the firth of Forth and in the firth of Clyde and in the Isles." (Ib., v. p. 13).

[2] Herezeld or heriot was originally the best horse or ox, or other animal or chattels, which became the property of the over lord on decease of his vassal or tenant. Latterly, the exaction was usually commuted into a fine or money payment.

[3] Between 1547 and 1551. There are no entries in the rental book of Glasgow barony between 4 April, 1547, and 23 March, 1552. Archbishop Gavin Dunbar died in April, 1547, and it was not till the year 1550 that the dean and chapter of Glasgow elected Alexander Gordon, brother of the Earl of Huntly, to be his successor. Gordon was never consecrated, and he resigned office in 1551, when James Betoun was appointed archbishop. Mr. James Howstoune, subdean of Glasgow, was vicar general of the vacant see in 1547-8, but he did not, as has sometimes been supposed, act in that capacity till his death, which happened in or about the year 1551. Gavin Hamilton, dean of the metropolitan church, was vicar general in 1549 and 1550, though the precise date of his appointment has not been ascertained (Glasgow Protocols, i. Nos. 23, 55, 64; ii. No. 616) Archibald Hamilton, who was probably related to the dean, seems to have acted as chamberlain under each of these vicars general.

[1] The attacks on churches and monasteries commenced at Perth in May, 1559, and continued in other places, were experienced also in Glasgow, though full particulars are not now procurable. It is known that a detachment of the lords of the congregation were in Glasgow in the beginning of the year 1560, and it has been stated that they sacked and plundered the churches. The president received the letters into his hands and came to the door of the choir and chapter of the metropolitan church of Glasgow (because he could not get admittance), and there instituted and invested the said Sir James, as procurator for Mr. Stephen into the real and corporal possession of the said rectory of Govan, by delivery of a book (because he could not get the surplice, cape and other usual ornaments),[1] the said procurator making solemn protestation that he had obtained lawful institution. Witnesses: William Hegait, notary, George Elphinston, writer, Sir John Nasmyth, David Boyd, James Hammiltoun.

1384. Betone—Executors of Betone—Govane. 31 July, 1560, 11 a.m. f. 45.

Mr. Alexander Betone, archdeacon of Lothian, and one of the executors of q. Mr. James Betoun, rector of Govan, his brother, for himself and (blank) Uchtirlony of that Ilk, and Margaret Ogilwy lady Melgum,[1] the other executors, came to the parish church of Govane, and there intimated and served a public instrument, under the sign and subscription manual of Mr. Hugh Lyndsay, notary public, dated at Melgum, 4 May, 1560, by virtue of which the said executors chose the surplus of the parsonage of Govan (elegerunt superplus rectorie), certain parishioners of Govane being there present; inhibiting them and the other parishioners from compounding with any other than with the said executors as regards the annat of the deceased rector;[2] protesting that if they should do otherwise they should be answerable.

[1]The name is written Margaret, but this is probably a mistake for Marion Ogilvy, the mistress of Cardinal Beaton, to whom as proprietrix of the lands of Melgund, Melgem, or Melgum, in Forfarshire, there are several references in the Great Seal Register. Thus, on 15 May, 1515, Marion Ogilvy, lady of North-Melgund, resigned the lands of South-Melgund in favour of David Betoun, her son (Reg. iii. No. 3108); and in another crown charter, dated 22 November, 1577, reference is made to the late Marion Ogilvy, lady of Melgem, mother of Agnes Betoun (Ib. iv. No. 2740). According to tradition, Melgund Castle, now in ruins, was built by Cardinal Beaton.

[2]Annat or ann (from annus, a year) was originally the fruits of a benefice for the year following the death of the incumbent. The modes of disposal seem to have been various, and in some cases the Pope had right to the proceeds. A Scottish statute, passed in 1547, when an invasion from England was imminent, provided that the fruits of benefices then on the ground, and the annat afterwards, should belong to the executors of such churchmen as should fall in the defence of their country. By act of Parliament, 1672 c. 24, annat was declared to be a half-year's stipend, falling due after the death of a bishop or minister, and payable to the deceased's executors.

f. 49. 1391. EARL OF CASSILLIS—MONKS OF GLENLUCE. 24 October, 1560, 4 p.m.

Andrew Langlandis, John Galbrayth, David Bullo, William Halkirstoun, and John Wilson, monks of the monastery of Glenluce, subscribed a charter of feu farm of the 180 merk land of their monastery, granted in their absence by Thomas Haye, their abbot, with consent of their convent, to a noble lord Gilbert earl of Cassillis; and they were content that as soon as they should be placed in their said monastery, and should have obtained their canonical portions in the usual manner, they should discharge the said earl of his obligations granted this day to them and each of them, so that these obligations should thereafter cease and be of no force. Also, the said earl bound himself, his heirs, and successors, for payment to the foresaid monks and each of them yearly of the respective sums specified in the said obligations, aye and until they should be restored to their place and portions and former state. Done in the collegiate church of Maybole.[1] Witnesses:

[1] The Cistercian abbey of Glenluce in Wigtonshire was founded by Roland, lord of Galloway, in the year 1120. Its chartulary which was used by Thomas Innes about 200 years ago has long since disappeared, but the abbey's history has been traced from other sources by Mr. David Henry in a contribution to the fifth volume of the "Archæological and Historical Collections relating to Ayrshire and Galloway." From the documents there printed, to which the protocol in the text may now be added, the account given in the "Historical and Genealogical account of the principal families of the name of Kennedy" regarding the acquisition by the Earl of Cassillis of the abbey lands of Glenluce is shown to have had little if any foundation in fact. The old story runs thus:—"This last Gilbertt was ane particuler manne, and ane very greidy manne, and cairit nocht how he gat land, sa that he culd cum be the samin, and for that caus he enterit in bloking with ane abbot of Glenluse, concerning the Abacie, to tak the samin in few; bot, or he gat the samin performit, the abbot deit. And than he delt with ane monk of the samin Abacie quha culd counterfitt the Abottis hand-writt, and all the haill conventtis; and gart him counterfitt thair subscriptions. And quhane he had gottine the samen done, feiring that the monk wald reveill it, he causit ane cairill, quhilk they callt Carnachaine, to stik (him); and thane, for feir that cairll had reveillit, he garit his fader-broder, Hew of Bargany (Barquhouny), accuse this cairll for theft, and hang him in Corsragall. And sa the landis of Glenluse wes conqueist." (Account, &c., with Notes by Robert Pitcairn, 1830, p. 9).

It appears that Gilbert, third Earl of Cassillis, was concerned in the administration of the abbey lands from the year 1513 when he was appointed baron bailie. Thomas Hay was chosen abbot in 1560, but the instrument of institution, dated 29th September of that year, narrates that the monastery was then occupied by the servants of John Gordoun, lord of Lochinvar, who refused to give entrance, "the religious men having been expelled, mass and divine worship interdicted and abolished." Gordon's claims were based on a charter obtained from the previous abbot in January, 1557-8. At this juncture, Gilbert, fourth earl of Cassillis, who had succeeded his father in November, 1558, took the part of abbot Thomas and his monks, and lodged and provided for them at Maybole; and it was then that the arrangement mentioned in the protocol of 24 October 1560, was entered into. A few days afterwards (viz., 2 November) the abbot and convent subscribed a writing in which they acknowledged "certain sowmes of mone, gratitudis, gud deidis, help, supple and manteinance done to and gevyn to ws and our abbey and kirk of Glenluce, and for sustenyn of ws and our brether and convent, thai beying on force expellit out of thair awn

[2] "De singulis bonis portione nature." One-third of a deceased father's moveable estate then fell as it still does to his surviving children, and was called portion natural, bairns' part of gear, or legitima pars liberorum.

[3] "Inche" in ancient topography is usually applied to an island, and it is probable that the lands here called Kyngis Inche were at one time surrounded by the Clyde. On Bleau's map (published in 1654), of that part of the river below its confluence with the Kelvin, several of such islands are shown (including Whyt Inch and another Kings Inch), all of which are now joined to the land. Kings Inch at Dalmarnock probably remained with the Woddrops (see No. 1497), a family who were rentalled in adjoining lands from early times, and who still retain their connection with the district.

In the circumstances narrated in this deliverance of the lords, Peter Lymburner may have been collecting the rents of the Friars Preachers of Glasgow under authority of the Crown communicated through the magistrates. Ten days afterwards (viz., 15 February, 1561-2) the privy council ordained that all annuals, maills and duties within free burghs or other towns, as well belonging to chaplainries and prebendaries as to Friars, together with the rents of the Friars' lands, should be intromitted with by such as the Queen should depute thereto, for employing the same towards hospitals, schools and other godly uses; and they farther authorised the magistrates of Glasgow and other burghs to appropriate for such purposes the places of Friars "as yet standand undemolissit" (Privy Council Register i. p. 202). The Friar Preachers of Glasgow at this time had lands in Dowhill, Longcroft and Broomielaw. Thirteen acres in Dowhill were conveyed to the College on 13 July, 1563 (Glasgow Charters, pt. ii. pp. 129-31), and the remainder would be included in the grant by Queen Mary, of which the College got the benefit as mentioned in the footnote to Protocol No. 924.

Whatever fate may have befallen the conventual buildings at the Reformation, the church of the Preaching Friars, in accordance with the usual practice, was reserved for religious services under the new system, though even it appears to have been somewhat damaged. On 24 April, 1574, the magistrates and council ordained "that the westir ruinous gavill of the Blackfreir kirk and the stanes thairof be tane doun, and be the skellat precedyng rowpit and sauld to the maist avale, and the price thairof convertit and applying to the mendyng of the wyndois and ministeris sait in the said kirk."

[1] The priory of Coldingham in Berwickshire (succeeding the monastery of the seventh century alluded to by Bede) was refounded by King Edgar in 1098, and granted to the monks of Durham. In 1485 King James III. and his parliament resolved on the suppression of the priory and the transfer of part of its revenues to the chapel royal of Stirling; and though the scheme was not carried out in its entirety, the connection between Coldingham and Durham appears to have then terminated. In 1509 the place was annexed to Dunfermline abbey, and a natural son of James IV. was appointed prior. After some intermediate appointments, John Stewart, a natural son of James V., was created prior in 1541, though he was then only about nine years of age. The prior thus appointed was the "commendator" referred to in the text. In 1560 Stewart joined the ranks of the Reformers; and in 1562, at which time the estates of the Earl of Lennox were in the possession of the crown through forfeiture, Queen Mary created him Lord Darnley, and conveyed to him portions of the Darnley estates. It would consequently be in virtue of this grant that the commendator became patron of the "chapel of St. Ninian of Dernlie."

[1] Henry Gibsone's act of admission as engrossed in the "Book of Admission of Notaries" in the General Register House bears date the last day (29) of February, 1563-4, though it narrates that the protocol book then produced by him contained the foregoing protocol dated 4 May, 1564. Assuming that the notary actually appeared on the date mentioned, the explanation probably is that the protocol book was retained by Gibsone at the time, and again sent to Edinburgh a few months later for the purpose of getting the leaves subscribed and the dates inserted in the act of admission. There are in the book at the Register House a large number of acts of admission bearing the same date, and it is obvious that all the notaries' books mentioned in these acts could not have been marked and the particulars relating to each noted and written out on one day.

[2] Here is an instance of the somewhat rare occurrence of two brothers bearing the same Christian name while both were alive. The transfer was noted in the rental book on 31 December, 1564, but the property is there called a "xv s. land" (Diocesan Registers, i. p. 157).

[1] According to ancient usage, parsons and other clerics might feu out the lands belonging to them, provided their benefices were improved by the yearly feu-duty being in excess of the former rent. But, as remarked by Erskine in his "Institute of the Law of Scotland" (B. ii. t. x. sec. 7), "When churchmen, on the first appearance of the Reformation in this kingdom, began to suspect that they might soon be deprived of their church revenues, they frequently feued their lands at a yearly duty considerably below their true value, for which they received large sums from the feuars in name of fine or entry; and the Pope . . . readily strengthened those grants by his confirmation." An act of the Privy Council, dated 10 September, 1561, refers to this practice, setting forth that "be occasioun of the last trublis, the maist part of the clergy and ecclesiastical estait hes, on thair pretendit maner, set the landis unite and annexit to the kirk in fewferme and heritage, to the greit hurt nocht onlie of the Quenis Majestie, bot als of the pure [poor] tennentis thairof, hir liegis of this realme; and the personis obtenaris of the saidis fewis, thinkand to mak thame the mare sure thairof, dailie sendis to Rome and bringis hame commissionis for confirmationis of the saidis fewis, consumand, waistand, and thairthrow in vane spendand the gold, sylver and uther money quhilk suld have course, passage and charge within the realme, to the greit hurt of the commone weill thairof and hale liegis of the samyn and express aganis justice." Confirmations from Rome of feus of kirk lands made subsequent to 6 March, 1558-9 were therefore prohibited and declared to be of no effect (Privy Council Reg., i. pp. 162-3). By another act, passed on 22 December, 1561, possessors of church lands which had been feued subsequent to the date above referred to, were not to be disturbed in their occupancy till Whitsunday, 1563 (Ib. p. 192), a

[2] For particulars regarding the Vicars of the Choir and their constitution, reference may be made to Archbishop Eyre's paper on "The Hall of the Vicars Choral," contributed to the Glasgow Archæological Society (Transactions, new series, vol. iii. pt. i. pp. 77-92). The vicars were constituted a college or corporation by bishop Andrew Muirhead about the year 1455. It was this bishop who founded St. Nicholas Hospital; and as the hospital and the body of vicars were each endowed with lands in Cropnestock and the neighbourhood (now partly included in Glasgow Green), it is probable that these lands were gifted by the common founder. It appears from protocols 1549-53 that the vicars had been disposing of portions of their lands for payment of annual feuduties. The property of the vicars was included in the grants made to the community of Glasgow by Queen Mary on 16 March, 1566-7, and by King James VI. on 5 June, 1568 (Glasgow Charters, pt. ii. pp. 131-40); but the individual vicars then in possession were entitled to the revenues during their lifetimes, subject to deduction of the third which, the legislature appointed to be levied from all benefices for support of the new order of clergy and for other purposes.

Sasine given on the ground. Witnesses: John Young in Knappis, James Holme in Dennestoun, John Lard there, John Greif, Thomas Roger, William Allansoun in Camehill, William Roger, smith, Macolm Patersoun in Craganis, Robert Patersoun there, and William Walker.

1598. Boyde—Hullirhill. 30 August, 1568, 8 a.m. f. 167.

John Neving of Kirkwod, acknowledged the 40 s. land of Hullirhill, lying in the regality of Kilwynning and bailiary of Conyghame, conveyed to him by James Boyd of Hullirhill, to be lawfully redeemed by the latter. Witnesses: James Hammiltoun, prebendary of St. Mary of the city of Glasgow, Robert Hutchinsoun, merchant, and John Gilcrist, servitor of lady Craganis.

1599. Rank. 7 September, 1568, 9 a.m.

Archibald Mure, smith, became cautioner and security for Jonet Rillik, spouse of William Bannatyne, to John Rank, eldest son of the said Jonet, and his heirs, that the sum of £4 resting upon the lands should be paid to the said John Rank, or his heirs, immediately after the decease of the said Jonet. And the said Jonet obliged herself to relieve and indemnify the said Archibald of the premises at the hand of the said John Rank and his heirs. Witnesses: Robert Glasgw and Mr. James Hammiltoun.

1600. Woddrop. 4 October, 1568, 4 p.m.

John Craig in Ruglyne sold to Archibald Woddrop, son of q. Thomas Woddrop, younger in Dalmarnok, a tenement, with tail, yard, and pertinents, containing a rood of land in breadth, lying in the North Wynd of the burgh of Ruglyn, between the lands of Henry Leche on the west, the lands of Thomas Withirspwne on the east, the common wynd on the south, and the Common Green on the north. Sasine given by Thomas Woddrop, bailie of Ruglyne. Witnesses: Henry Leche, John Woddrop, James Fary, John Louk, burgess of Ruglyn, and Walter Woddrop. Property redeemable for £10, with 31 s. 8 d. yearly.

HENRY GIBSONE. Vol. i. fol. 167.

f. 168. 1601. LYNDSAYE—LYNDSAYE. 10 November, 1568, 2 p.m.

Mr. John Hall, citizen of Glasgow, acknowledged that he had received from David Lyndsaye, son and heir of q. Michael Lyndsaye, citizen of Glasgow, and Elizabeth Lindsay, his spouse, the sum of 40 merks contained in a reversion for redemption of a half acre of land, lying t.c., in the croft called Langcroft, between the kiln of q. Patrick Andersoun on the south, and the common wynd on the north; and Mr. John resigned the property in favour of Lindsay and his spouse, to whom Mr. Adam Wallace, bailie, gave sasine. Witnesses: David Lyndsaye of Kittokside, Alexander Lyndsaye, brother of Mr. John Lyndsaye, James Cochrane, Robert Lettrik, citizens of Glasgow, and James Andersone, officer.

1602. RANKYNE. 3 December, 1568, 3 p.m.

John Stewart of Mynto, knight, for a sum of money and composition paid to him, sold to Archibald Rankyne, merchant, citizen of Glasgow, a fore nether merchant booth of a great fore tenement built by q. Mr. James Houston, sub-dean of Glasgow, on the west side of the street leading from the market cross to the great bridge over the Clyde, which booth was then occupied by the said Archibald; lying between the booth occupied by William Hall on the north and that occupied by Robert Allansone on the south. Sasine given by Mr. Adam Wallace, bailie. Archibald and his heirs and assignees to pay 40 s. yearly as annualrent (annuum censum) to those
f. 169. having right thereto.[1] Witnesses: John Moresoun, royal messenger (nuncio regio), Robert Alderstoun in Miltoun, and Thomas Spang.

[1] The property mentioned in this protocol was apparently part of the fore tenement acquired by Sir John Steward from the provost and prebendaries of the collegiate church in April, 1563 (vol. iii. protocol No. 743); subject to the deduction of one-third set apart by the legislature for the support of ministers and other purposes (Privy Council Register i. p. 202). The feuduty was then payable to the provost and prebendaries; and such of them as retained their benefices in December, 1568, retained the same right; because though the magistrates and council of Glasgow acquired right to the feuduty under the charter granted to them by Queen Mary on 16 March, 1566-7 (Glasgow Charters, pt. ii. pp. 131-7), the liferent rights of the prebendaries were reserved. But, by a precept granted by King James VI. to the city on 5 June, 1568 (Ib.

1603. Bogill. 20 December, 1568, 12 m.

Henry Gibsone. Vol. I. fol. 169.

John Hammiltoun, son of q. Eduard Hammiltoun, acknowledged that he had received from John Bogill in Bogillis Hoill 10 merks in complete payment of the sum of 20 merks contained in a contract between them, subscribed by q. David Norwell, notary, dated 2 November, 1562; and discharged Bogill and renounced whatever right he had or might have to lands or sums of money by virtue of a contract between the said q. Eduard Hammiltoun, Jonet Gillis, spouse of q. Robert Bogle, and the said John, his son, subscribed by q. Sir David M'Keuyn, notary, dated 11 June, 1552; or from any other cause whatever; and in all things he ratified the said contract subscribed by David Norvell. Witnesses: John Campbell, citizen of Glasgow, Alexander Woddrop in Dalmarnok, John Govane, Thomas Cuik, and John Graye in Auchinkill.

pp. 137-40), the magistrates and council were authorised to uplift the thirds of church revenues for crop 1567 and subsequent years, and the possessors of altarages and chaplainries were forbidden to uplift their portions till these thirds were paid or security given therefor. These arrangements explain the indefiniteness of the above protocol with regard to the persons to whom the "annualrent" or feuduty was to be paid.
